Notable

- Course saw driest January on record with record-low snow totals (less than 6" for the winter). Course suffered from desiccation even with green covers and full-course top dressing program. Unseasonably cold spring has led to challenges.
- The rough has been narrowed with more un-mowed fine fescue grown out.
- Recent renovations include tee expansions (2018-22) and bunker restoration (2023-24).
- Fairways for the 2017 U.S. Open were fine fescue.
- Very minimal shaping was performed in building the course as the architects used the existing natural contours left by glaciers.

- The tournament is being held two weeks earlier on the calendar than the 2017 U.S. Open and Reineking says "we see the most change to our property in the month of May."
- The 20-year-old course is hosting its 5th USGA event this week and has already been awarded five future USGA tournaments.
- The course is a low input facility with limited irrigation with over 150 acres of un-mowed fine fescue.
- Course is Audubon certified.
- Assistant John Jacques has been here for 10 years, while assistant Bryan Fenney worked at course in high school and came back 15 years later in 2019 as an assistant.
- Maintenance tournament volunteer group includes 31 women from around the country.
